

Rating Action: Moody's downgrades five Danish banks' senior ratings following reduction of systemic support

Global Credit Research - 16 Feb 2011

Ratings incorporating systemic support placed on review for further possible downgrade; outlook on three banks' financial strength ratings changed to negative from stable

London, 16 February 2011 -- Moody's Investors Service has taken various rating actions on a number of Danish banks. These actions follow the bankruptcy and transfer of Amagerbanken to a government-backed entity, Financial Stability, on February 6th 2011, demonstrating both the willingness and ability of the Danish government to use resolution tools provided under new legislation to impose losses on depositors and senior creditors in a bankruptcy.

The long-term ratings of Danske Bank A/S, Spar Nord Bank A/S, FIH Erhvervsbank A/S, Ringkjøbing Landbobank A/S and BankNordik P/F were downgraded, and the long-term ratings of Danske Bank, FIH Erhvervsbank, and BankNordik remain on review for further possible downgrade. The long-term ratings of Nordea Bank Danmark A/S, Sydbank A/S, and Jyske Bank A/S were placed on review for possible downgrade, and the outlooks on the standalone bank financial strength ratings of Spar Nord Bank A/S, FIH Erhvervsbank A/S, and BankNordik P/F were changed to negative from stable. The short-term ratings of Spar Nord Bank and FIH Erhvervsbank were also downgraded, and the short-term rating of BankNordik was placed on review for possible downgrade. (See below for a full list of rating actions.)

SYSTEMIC SUPPORT ASSUMPTIONS REDUCED TO LOW FROM HIGH

"Today's rating actions reflect a reduction in Moody's systemic support assumptions for Danish banks," says Oscar Heemskerk, Vice President. "Last week's bankruptcy of Amagerbanken demonstrated both the willingness and ability of the government to allow depositors and senior creditors of Danish banks to take losses in bankruptcy, where bank operations are continued as a going concern." As a consequence, Moody's has reduced the systemic support assumptions it uses for Danish banks, downgrading the senior debt and deposit ratings of five banks by between 1 and 2 notches and removing systemic support from all but the four largest banks in Denmark.

To date, Moody's considered the probability of government support for Danish banks to be high, reflecting the absence of deposit losses in the past 20 years, the importance of the Danish banking system for the national economy, and the support the government has extended in the recent past, including substantial volumes of bank debt guaranteed by the government in support of the banks. However, the enactment of the Bank Package III law in October 2010 provides a framework for the resolution of ailing banks in which losses can be allocated not only to core equity, hybrid capital, and subordinated debt, but also to senior debt and deposits. Combined with its implementation with respect to Amagerbanken in February 2011, this law implies that the Danish government is now far less willing to continue to support bank creditors at the expense of tax payers than it was only a few months ago. Consequently, we have changed our assumption on systemic support to 'low' for Denmark, the lowest category within our systemic support framework.

Moody's expects to learn more over the coming months of the implications of the Danish government's actions for the Danish financial system, which may in turn shed light on the feasibility of maintaining a less supportive stance in future. We will therefore undertake a further assessment of the Danish government's intentions over the coming months, in line with Moody's recent publication "Supported Bank Debt Ratings at Risk of Downgrade Due to New Approaches to Bank Resolution". Consequently, debt and deposit ratings of the four banks that retain systemic uplift in their ratings -- Danske Bank (A1 incorporating two notches of systemic support), Nordea Bank Danmark (Aa2 incorporating two notches of systemic support), Jyske Bank (A1 incorporating one notch of systemic support), and Sydbank (A1 incorporating one notch of systemic support) -- have been placed on review for further possible downgrade. The review reflects our opinion that the Danish law and practice are substantially different to our historical expectations on government support, while taking into account the size and systemic importance of these banks.

NEGATIVE OUTLOOK ON STANDALONE FINANCIAL STRENGTH RATINGS REFLECTS POSSIBLE FUNDING PRESSURE

The change in outlooks to negative from stable on three banks' standalone bank financial strength ratings -- FIH Erhvervsbank (D BFSR mapping to a Ba2 baseline credit assessment, BCA), Spar Nord Bank (C-/Baa1), and BankNordik (C-/Baa2) --, results in all Danish banks now having negative outlooks for their BFSRs. This view is guided by the expectation that, following Amagerbanken's bankruptcy, Danish banks' funding will be more vulnerable to investor and depositor transfers.

In Moody's opinion, Amagerbanken's bankruptcy and the resulting losses will raise depositors' and creditors' awareness of the risk of loss, particularly in Denmark. We foresee increased pressure on Danish banks' funding, both from local unguaranteed depositors (amounts above EUR 100,000 equivalent) and from international investors (approximately 40% of deposits and inter-bank funding). For a number of banks, this pressure will be in addition to substantial future refinancing needs, since the government's individual guarantees expire before the end of 2013 (for the rated banks with government guaranteed funding, on average more than 20% of total funding benefits from an individual government guarantee). We now maintain negative outlooks on all Danish banks' standalone bank financial strength ratings, and will evaluate these additional pressures as they unfold over the coming months.

An in-depth discussion of the changes to Moody's support assumptions for Denmark, along with a description of the Bank Package III laws, will be published shortly in a Moody's Special Comment.

This press release does not address any rating impact that these rating actions may have on the affected banks' covered bonds.
